Skysisters take the plunge

ARE you looking for an adrenaline fix?

Planned on making a crazy New Year's Resolution?

Why not join 100 of the country's most impressive female adrenaline junkies at the 2011 Skysisters convention to break some skydiving world records and participate in some of the 5000 jumps planned for the ten-day event?

The Skysisters will meet for their third convention in Toogoolawah, Queensland, where they plan to break four Australian and two world skydiving records.

The ladies will participate in various all-women skydives, including a 60-way formation to break the existing 47-way record set in 2005 and a 20-way over-40s formation to break the 16-way record set in 2007.

Organisers have put out the call for female skydivers as well as 'skydiving virgins' to get on board and register their interest at www.skysisters.com.au

They haven't forgotten about their male counterparts either with the gents being invited along to participate in various activities during the convention.

Susie McLachlan, organiser of the event said that female skydivers from all over Australia and around the globe will attend as well as a 'who's who' list of some of the world's most renowned coaches including Amy Chmelecki, Melissa Nelson and Kate Cooper-Jensen.
